Remember, details are facts or information about the main idea. Details will often better help you understand a text. Often, these details will answer the questions Who?, What?, Where?, Why?, and How?. Click here to watch a short informational film, "Amy's Aviation: What are Satellites?" Try to identify these details: Who?: What?: Where?: Why?: How? 	Have you ever been travelling and needed to use GPS to get somewhere? Do you know how that system got you where you needed to go? Click here to get a better idea by exploring NASA's explainer website, "How Does GPS Work?" After you get a better idea how GPS works, type your address into Google Earth! Click here to access the site. 	The Hubble Telescope, launched in 1990, takes beautiful, clear images of space. Have you seen the images it takes? If not, click here! 	Every sentence has a subject and a predicate. The verb in the predicate must match the subject. Use a plural form for a plural subject and a singular form for a singular subject. Click here to play Verb Viper and practice your subject-verb agreement! 	When you compare and contrast, you tell what is the same about two things and what is different. Click here to access a site that will let you compare and contrast photos of St. Louis from the past with photos from the present. Choose one of the given photosets and complete a Venn Diagram for it:
