Student workers often demonstrate responsibility, independence, and strong organizational skills; however, they may also experience fatigue, heightened stress, or reduced availability for assignments and extracurricular commitments. By understanding these challenges, educators can respond with empathy, maintain high expectations while offering flexibility when appropriate, and provide guidance that helps students balance their academic responsibilities with their work commitments.

Pre Vet students recently created “pet rocks” as a fun way to practice responsibility and creativity while mimicking real pet care. Each rock was decorated with unique features and given a name, personality, and “care plan.” The project offered a lighthearted introduction to animal care concepts while encouraging responsibility and imagination.

On August 28, 2025, Gateway STEM kicked off the new school year with a heartwarming Senior Sunrise event. Seniors gathered early in the morning to celebrate the beginning of their final year together, enjoying a relaxed and fun atmosphere before classes began. Students arrived in cozy pajamas, shared laughs with friends, and snacked on donuts as they watched the sun rise over the Arch. It was a memorable way to mark the start of senior year, bringing the class of 2026 together for a moment of excitement and community.
